

Institutional Review Board

Ensuring Safe & Ethical Research

All research studies using human volunteers must follow stringent federal regulations that require a review by an Institutional Review Board (IRB) before the study is approved. The IRB Committee, comprised of physicians, pharmacists, scientists, researchers, and non-scientific community representatives, reviews research protocol to ensure protections are in place for people volunteering in the study.

We thank the current and past members of the IRB at the UT Graduate School of Medicine who have given countless hours to ensure patient safety and promote life-changing research. Current members include:
